Cultural Studies Central

Welcome to www.culturalstudies.net

This is our new home!

Many more changes, additions, and innovations are coming this summer. Don't touch that back button!

The CSC Reading Room is open again.

(Please go to http://www.washtech.org/day2/index.html for information on how to help the Amazon.com customer support workers.)

Once the Reading Room is open, we will begin to add the following:

1. Growth from one to several to many booksellers, large and small. We will also have links to books in the public domain. We have no plans to leave Amazon, but do wish our surfers to pay attention to the situations of workers in ALL e-commerce companies.

2. Partnerships with other academic/reading/writing supply dealers like Levenger and/or whomever is interested in setting up a partnership to offer high quality products helpful to academics. I will direct you to good prices for good products on these sites. Remember, CSC gets absolutely no

This stunning new spot by the Mill has no graphics in motion, but is still worth a look for the great concept and amazing moves performed by the acrobats. There are several ads floating around the nets right now that center around performance and staging, where everything seems like it is possible to really create in-camera. New trend perhaps?

Animation Resources on the Web

- Cartoon Brew: Leading the Animation Conversation
  Animation blog that’s an excellent source for animation news and for reading thoughts of some of the top animators who post here.

- Drawn.com
  Bibliographic website providing links to sites featuring illustrators, animators and cartoonists. Updated frequently by multiple editors.

- Firehouse Stomp
  Blog of story/artist Nick Sung who works at Pixar Animation Studios.

- Frames Per Second Magazine
  Quebec-based blog which accompanies the print magazine. FPS covers animation generally, but with a particular focus on anime.

- Hollywood Animation Archive (ASIFA)
  One of the best comprehensive collections of historical animation and illustrations with a 2D emphasis.

- Hydrospheric
  A blog by Canada-based Jeff Haslau covering mainly independent animation. Independent animators are a great source of opinions and ideas, and often cite links to other websites.

- Michael Sporn Animation, Inc.
  A blog "to feature the art, animation, work and some of the thoughts of the artists working at Michael Sporn Animation". Michael Sporn is an accomplished New York Animator. Links included.

- Motionographer
  Motion graphics web portal, featuring examples of studio works, high resolution clips, feature stories, and commentary.

Bundle Tags

Tags: bundle tags

Bundles are a way to arrange previously-used tags into groups. For example, if you have the tags "design", "painting", and "moma", you may want to group these together into a bundle called "art".

To create a new bundle, type the name of the bundle and click create. You can then start entering tags by clicking on the tag cloud below, or by typing tags directly into the text box. To remove a tag, click on the tag in the cloud or delete it from the text box. When you are finished, you must remember to hit the save changes button, or your changes will be lost.
