The public library is an open door to all humanmankind expressions, particularly those censored by no justified reason. So come in, open this door and take a trip to some of the 20th Century most controversial erotic literature displayed on the tables.

Check out these books on the Adult Section Collection:

Delta of Venus of Anais Ninn. This Spanish woman of the 1930s really shook the way sex was conceived. Delta of Venus is a mixture of the wildest erotism and sexual liberation of women sensibility. It breaks the tradition of women as having sex only for procreation but rather for pleasure too; not big deal now, but this was in the 1930s. Reviewed by Zapopan Muela.

Tropic of Cancer is the masterpiece of American Henry Miller written too in the 1930s in Paris. It is one of the most controversial and banned novels ever. It severely criticizes American society on mostly all orders of life as having a double and hypocrite moral, but particularly in the way of considering sexuality. The language is rude, the content nihilistic, anarchical, anti-Christianity. Reviewed by Zapopan Muela.

ndera is another society's pain on the neck on sexual revolution. Written in 1980s it gives us a picture of a sharp critique to ex socialist Eastern nations. Criticizes the hypocrite and double moral and values of contemporary society on sexual matters with an international scope. Masterfully written, with real historical content and strong erotic images.
