Library and Information Science Critique* launches its second issue of the fourth volume (Jul-Dec 2011), by: Zapopan Martín Muela-Meza (MEXICO)

Dear reader,

Library and Information Science Critique: the Journal of the Sciences of Information Recorded in Documents* puts in your hands the second issue of the fourth volumen. This corresponds to the July-December 2011, edited fully by Zapopan Martín Muela-Meza.

Library and Information Science Critique* maintains firmly its critical editorial policy against censorship and intelectual impostures within the sciences of information recorded in documents, at the same time maintains its editorial quality through a rigorous double-blinded peer-review process through an editorial board comprising 25 experts of the theory and practice of various sciences of information recorded in documents from different parts of the world: Argentina (2); Botswana (1); Brazil (1); Colombia (2); Germany (1); Spain (2); India (2); Italy (1); Mexico (4); Nicaragua (1); Peru (2); Portugal (1); Serbia (1); South Africa (1); Ukraine (1); USA (1); Venezuela (1).

New in this issue. Three articles were published in this number, all of them from Mexico; 1 essay from the USA; 1 bibliography from Mexico; and 1 book review.

José Antonio Torres-Reyes (MEXICO) opens up (originally in Spanish) the section of Articles with his critical work: “Critical considerations about the personal and profesional prestige and dignity of librarians.”

Also from MEXICO, Felipe Meneses Tello, continue (originally in Spanish) with the critical debates with his paper: “The disaster of the aboriginal documentation during the Spaniard invasion-conquest in Mesoamérica (Middle ancient America).”

Celso Martínez Musiño, also from Mexico closed the sections of Articles (originally in Spanish) with his paper: ”Information phenomenological research in factories: analysis to its methodology.”

From the USA, James Weinheimer contributes his interesting essay (originally in English) Is RDA (Resource Description & Access) the only way? An alternative option through international cooperation .

Zapopan Martín Muela-Meza (MEXICO), submits his critical bibliography: “Towards a critical and labor librarianship.”

Finally, Seth Kershner (USA) submits a critical review of a critical book: “Book review: Accardi, M., Drabinski, E., & Kumbier, A. (Eds.). (2010). Critical Library Instruction: Theories & Methods. Duluth, MN: Library Juice Press.”

I thank very much to our authors and readers that through these long years have walked along with us with their critical Reading and contributions. I also earnestly thank our peer reviewers who have participated with our journal during this time, and who with their voluntary and uninterested efforts have contributed to maintain the highest quality standards of peer reviewing, and at the same time they have contributed to promote more and more authors time after time. I also thank the new 4 peer-reviewers who have joined us in this number: Prof. Dr. Priti Jain from Botswana; Ms. Paola Andrea Ramírez Pérez from Colombia; Ms. Isabel Espinal from the USA; and Ms. Iryna Solodovnik from Ukraine. I also thank the new 2 English proof readers: Cheryl Nabati and Seth Kershner. I also thank our previous proof readers: Colleen Major and William Abrams both from the USA who could not continue being our proof readers due to other professional endeavours.

Thank you to all of you, since with you and for you it is that we continue ahead without rest in our critical, progressive, and alternative editorial project to the mainstream capitalist-bourgeois ones. We keep in communication in the next issue.

Without more extensive prologues, we leave you with this great collective and international effort for you to submit it to your rigorous critique and analysis, and even more we wait in the next days for your critical contributions for the January-July 2012 issue. You might send us as well your comments and suggestions to improve the journal. Thank you. CB.
