Abstract

Minangkabau society is very well known of their oral tradition named kaba babarito that expresses a message from one to others orally. Oral tradition of Minangkabau is very strong in many aspects of life, for example the tradition of maota di lapau (chatting on lapau), which is one way for men in Minangkabau to communicate and socialize. All forms of oral tradition in Minangkabau society contains of various information values such as, religion valuable information, information of historical value, customs and public practices information, information that has the values of local wisdom in the daily life of the community, as well as genealogical information or descendant of a family in the community. All of the information are received, developed, and derived to future generations through a wide variety of oral tradition, known by the Minangkabau society. These include various forms of oral tradition in a traditional ceremony which tend to be formal, oral traditions relating to the association in people's daily life, oral tradition of mantra, and the oral tradition in the form of performing arts. However, the issues raise at this time, oral tradition has begun to be abandoned and forgotten by the Minangkabau society. In addition due to the metanarrative discourse that create the public opinion such local culture is less meaningful, rapid information and communication technology development and the lack of any transfer in oral tradition affect the existence of oral tradition in Minangkabau society. Documentation and information centers, such as libraries, archives institution, as well as museum has a moral responsibility to identify, collect, preserve and actualize the oral tradition, particularly the information contained in the oral tradition. Preservation of knowledge in oral tradition is one step into the collective responsibility of government and society in preservation, storage, and the actualization of the oral tradition.

Keyword: the oral tradition, Minangkabau society, the value of information.

Minangkabau society is a term for a group of people who inhabit in most of the province of West Sumatera, Indonesia. They are lived in the area of 18,000 square meters which is stretching from north to south in Indian Ocean and Bukit Barisan Mountain Range. Minangkabau society is very well known with their oral tradition kaba barito that conveys the message by word of mouth. Oral tradition of Minangkabau society is very strong in many aspects of life, for example the tradition Maota di lapau. Maota di lapau is having a small talk with friends in bar which is one way for men in Minangkabau to communicate and socialize.

On its development, the oral tradition of minangkabau could be grouped in four of the most common type such as, the oral tradition in a traditional ceremony which tend to be formal, oral tradition relating to the association in people's daily life, oral tradition of mantra, and the oral tradition in art performances.

All forms of oral tradition in Minangkabau society contains many values such as the religious values, historical values, customs and values of society, values that incorporating local wisdom in the daily life of the community, as well as information containing genealogical or history of family in the society. The oral tradition has been around since the start of establishment of Minangkabau community. The tradition handed down from generation to generation. Most of the existing oral tradition in Minangkabau society is still a tacit knowledge that is stored in the memory of the older generation. There are only few of the various type of oral tradition has been formed in explicit knowledge and well documented. For example, the oral traditions of indigenous rhymes, sambah kato, barabab, badendang, or barandai only known by several people, especially the older generation of Minangkabau.

Oral tradition could be found only in some cultural activities that held in the community. This phenomenon caused negative impact in preserving oral tradition in Minangkabau. There have been only limited number of people who know, understand and master the tradition. Inheritance of the traditions only handed from certain people who are having kinship relation with the owners knowledge. Besides, the oral tradition has begun to be abandoned and forgotten by young generation in Minangkabau society. The existency of oral tradition in Minangkabau society not only effected by metanarrative discourse that shaping public opinion about insignificant of local traditions, but also rapid development of information and communication technology leading to the lack of transfer information in oral tradition. Therefore, the necessary actions should be taken in maintaining and preserving the oral tradition. Preservation is not just limited to keeping the form of oral tradition in the community, but the values that contained in the oral tradition.

A. Oral Tradition in Minangkabau Society and The Risk of Losing

Oral tradition contains historical events, moral values, religious values, custom, fantasy stories, songs, spells, as well as the proverb goes, and ancestors advice. Oral tradition has been around since humans have the ability to communicate. The inheritance process that has been run for generations and the direct interaction between the speakers and their communities are the two main things in the process of creating an oral tradition in the community. Oral tradition refers to the processes and products that are unwritten. For example, the myth, genealogy or family tree, the images are revealed in a particular community about its history, the forms of knowledge and other oral narrative.

Ki-Zerbo argues that the oral tradition can be interpreted as a testimony delivered verbally from one generation to the next, with tends to the verba and the way how messages are delivered (Ki-Zerbo, 1990: 54).

Oral tradition can also be interpreted as a form of a number of customs that have been established in certain communities, a series of belief, the routines which is performed repeatedly to show the continuity through the spoken word or phrase by mouth (Errington, 1984).

It is concluded that oral tradition is a form of practice in conveying messages or verbal testimony about the things that happened in the past or the present to be passed on to the next generation.

Minangkabau society is one of the ethnic groups in Indonesia who use oral tradition. Minangkabau society is very famous for its tradition of kaba babarito and maota di lapau. There is an assumption at the level of masculinity in Minangkabau society about the degree of socialization. If there is a man who was never involved in maota di lapau, then that person would be considered as unsocialized person in the group, even he is not accepted as part of the community.

In general, the oral traditions of Minangkabau society can be grouped into four types. First, the oral tradition in traditional ceremonies, such as batagak pangulu ceremony, and ceremonies are closely related to daily life, such as upacara turun mandi (baby blessing ceremony), wedding ceremony, and funeral ceremony. The oral tradition in these ceremonies tend to be formal such as adage custom, customary speeches, and sambah kato.

Second, the oral tradition in context of dendang-dendang perintang hati which singing a song in rhyme, example batintin and bajoden. This oral tradition is performed in various daily activities and more informal. The rhymes were generally sung as a joke or a poem that accompanied by music which is related with daily activities of Minangkabau people.

Third, shamanism in the form of spells which have its own characteristics and language structures. Spell contains mystical elements and certain rituals. At first, mantra is a form of oral traditions containing certain rituals which used to deal with mystical interests, such as witchcraft or pellets. But there is also a spell in the form of verses for healing of various diseases.

Fourth, oral performances such as barandai, barabab, and bakaba. Oral performances is incorporating between the oral tradition of rhymes or tales with performing arts, such as dance, music, and martial arts.

All types of oral traditions in Minangkabau society is had the meaning and value. Value that contained in the oral tradition of minangkabau society can be form in religious knowledge, history, politics, customs, economic, war tactics and the values of philosophy in social life.

However, these values are uncommon to listed explicitly. It is because the Minangkabau society is peoples who using high-level communication in the context of everyday life. Minangkabau people is familiar with the metaphor, parable, as well as courtesy in communication. It is clearly seen in the oral traditions of society using metaphor and allegory in conveying something.

Examples of rhyme in oral tradition of Minangkabau society:

Kaluak paku kacang balimbiang
Tampuruang lenggang-lengangkan
Anak dipangku kamanakan dibimbiang
Urang kampuang dipatengangkan

meaning:

Trunk of fern , nut of starfruit
 Coconut shell was swayed
 Child was on lap, nephew was guided
 Villagers were considered

Commentary Content:

Anak dipangku, kamanakan dibimbiang, urang kampuang dipatenggangkan. These rhymes is one of the customary rules that are having matrilineal characteristic in Minangkabau. In matrilineal, the tribe or lineage is based on the mother instead of father. Therefore, the Minangkabau men, not only have the responsible to educate their children but also to his nephew. In addition, the Minangkabau men should be concerned with the environment surrounding communities. Customary rules described in this rhymes, explaining the level of obligations, foremost among them is 'on the lap', lower than it is 'guided', and the last is 'considered'.

There are two basic understanding of the rule:

1. The level of concern about dedicating men's life to others is children at foremost, then is nephews, and the last is community.
2. Men should try at every level to build his presence could be felt by everyone. If it is not possible with the money, at least with guidance, caring, and advice. (Darwis St. Sati, 2007)

Oral tradition of the Minangkabau need to be preserved not solely because it is a cultural treasure. Oral tradition also contained lots of values that play the important role in people's daily activities. Besides, the oral tradition is a form of identity of Urang Minang.

The existence of oral tradition is important in creating the name of Minangkabau society in the world community. Oral tradition of the Minangkabau, either in the form of customary speech, mantra, pertunjukkan art, tale, and rhyme is a very valuable asset. If they losing their oral tradition then the existence of Minangkabau society will be questioned as well.

Oral tradition is not only related with form, like rhymes, poems, spells, kaba, as well as customary speech. Notably, they are contain various values of the society such religious values, political values, economic, social culture, philosophy about life and other moral values.

The main problems in the preservation of oral tradition is most of form of the tradition were in tacit knowledge. So, only few people has known exactly the meaning and values containing in the oral tradition. At last, because of the limitation of public knowledge about the oral tradition, there are several details that should be present in oral tradition has began to be forgotten or left out because ignorance.

As an example, in the form of spells of oral tradition, such as gasiang tangkurak. In executing this oral tradition, person should using human skulls as gasing to meet the condition based on rules of the tradition. In addition, there are other conditions that must be fulfill in order of the implementation these traditions and conditions were known only to certain people.

The loss of these knowledge affected the significancy of ceremony. It has reduced the essence of the oral tradition that already existed and developed in the community. It also has cultivated the plagiarisms and recognitions from others when public ignoring the oral tradition. If the tradition hadn't handed immediately and spreading out among next generation, then values in the oral tradition will begin translated and interpreted in different meaning according to their knowledge and understanding of the people.

B. Preservation Measures in Preserving Oral Tradition of Minangkabau Society

The starting of disappearance and forgetting of oral tradition in Minangkabau society is not only related to the loss of a cultural asset in the community, but also followed by the loss of values and local wisdom which is preserved in that tradition. There are plentiful values in the oral tradition that is still relevant to everyday life. However, the limitation of public knowledge about the traditions and values has been eroding of awareness of the existence of the local culture in society.

Knowledge related to the oral traditions of Minangkabau society is mostly tacit knowledge, that is stored in memories of the older generation. Only certain person has known surely about the procedures and implementation of the oral tradition, the terms of condition of the oral tradition, as well as the meanings, values and philosophies contained in the oral tradition. The death of that certain person will cause the loss of knowledge if such knowledge is undocumented or has not transferred well to the next generation. Therefore, the oral tradition of the Minangkabau really need to be sustained and preserved, not only in the context of the form, but also in the context of the values that hold on the oral tradition.

According to Karsono about the methods in preserving the knowledge which is tacit, then there are eight steps that can be taken in preserving the value and knowledge of the oral traditions of Minangkabau society, namely:

1. Knowledge capturing, is activity in capturing and identifying all existing oral tradition in Minangkabau society and making the list of the people who mastered the oral tradition

Minangkabau is divided into several small areas, such as the Padang, Pariaman, Agam, Tanah Datar, Pesisir Selatan and Lima Puluh Koto. Each areas has different tradition and culture, including on their oral traditions. In the oral tradition, geographical of lorong or neighborhood influences the way people speak in the area. The differences are related to vocabulary, pronunciation, intonation, and the meaning of the word.

For example, the manner of people who lived in Pasisia (coast) is different with the manner of Darek people (the community living in mountains). The word litak for Pasisia means exhausted, while for the Darek means starving.

Therefore, it's necessary for identifying and inventarizing oral traditions in each areas in Minangkabau. The purpose of this activities is to determine the assets of the oral traditions that is owned in each region, such as the varieties and diversities of the oral tradition as well as the prominent of oral tradition that became the characteristic of the area.

After identifying the oral traditions of each area, we also have to identify the elders who are expert in oral tradition. Making list of people who understand the oral tradition is an important point in preservation activities.

2. Codification of identified oral tradition

Codification is a activities in conversing tacit knowledge which is possessed by the elders of about oral tradition into the knowledge which allows for the transfer into explicit form. As Faust (2010), the conversion of tacit knowledge that can be do with two approaches that is socialization and externalization. Socialization is activities in transferring the tacit knowledge from one individual to others, in this case, the knowlege was transfered from elders to those who do preservation. The transfer can be done through direct interaction with the elders, the imitation of all actions and activities performed by the elder in relation to oral tradition, and taken experience. The series of activities can be done through job-shadowing. Externalization is transfer activities of tacit knowledge that has been owned by individuals who do preservation into explicit knowledge.

This codification activities according to Faust, can also be done by observation of the mentor and the knowledge possessed by the elder, conducting seminars and knowledge transfer activities conducted directly by the people who are experts in the oral tradition, virtual reality is gained through experience in the job activity-shadowing, as well as designing the questions to be asked in connection with the acquisition of knowledge.

3. Documenting oral tradition of Minangkabau

In oral tradition, it allows lost or reduced the message over time in processes. To maintain the retention of the meaning of the message, there should be documentation of oral traditions that exist in Minangkabau society. This documentation can include printed documents and electronic documents and audio-visual. The merits of the implementation procedures and meaning in oral tradition is not degradation, although it has been done in a very long time span.

4. Debriefing and repackage oral tradition of Minangkabau

Oral tradition in Minangkabau society should be packed into an attractive shape, so it's easy to learn and understand. Oral traditions, in addition to load the historical value and the value of local information for the community was expected to become a commodity that can bring benefits to the user community tradition. For example, the rhymes that used in the oral tradition parintang, can be collaborated with the art of music using modern instruments and presented in a more varied, but does not destroy the meaning of the poem. Using of the media are more familiar with today's society. It will facilitate the transfer of oral tradition to the next generation because it's easier to be accepted and understood.

5. Personalization, a knowledge-based activities to build the tendon to the nature of connectedness between people.

This personalization of activities can be performed among others by entering into the oral tradition of competence in formal education, mentoring of persons or groups who are interested in oral tradition, as well as establish a consistent community conservation and development of the oral tradition.

Educational institution is one place that is very effective to introduce the traditions and culture to the younger generation, one of which is about the texts are owned by the Minangkabau society. The recognition of Minangkabau text through an educational institution can be applied through official channels, such as introducing Minangkabau text into General Objectives Instructional of education, or through informal education.

State University of Padang as a public university in West Sumatra has been having a course about Natural and Cultural Minangkabau under the Department of Language and Literature Indonesia since 2005. This study program aims is to create competent educators about Minangkabau culture, one of it is about text of Minangkabau society.

Library Information and Archival Study are incorporating in the same department, is also has a few subjects that very close relationship with the presence of Minangkabau text, the bibliography Minangkabausiana and Kodekologi Minangkabau. Through this course, students learn the written texts in Minangkabau and able to make a bibliographic description of the manuscript as well as to be able in reading and transliterate the existing manuscripts. Minangkabau culture has also been introduced through educational institutions since elementary school. Subjects like Budaya Alam Minangkabau is conducted by local government in their concern on the sustainability of the Minangkabau culture.

6. Tandon knowledge in Library and Application of information and communication technologies in the preservation of oral traditions Minangkabau

As it grows, libraries especially the Municipal Region Library still serves as a repository of existing texts in the community. Libraries only keep those texts as part of the library collection. The library functions should be switched from the repository into local heritage services in order to preserve and sustainable the contents of the texts that were made in the community.

Local Heritage Services is a concept of services available in the library with emphasizing on the existence of texts that are owned by the public, such as oral traditions and ancient manuscripts. Librarian in this case not only acts as a "signpost" where the text is stored di library, but more to important person knowing everything about the text. Librarians must mastering the text, in terms of history, the existence of text, the information contained in the text, as well as other information that comes with the appearance of text.

Libraries must aggressively in campaigning within the framework for preservation activities of the text. the activities could be like,contest in making descriptions of text bibliographic, the contest in services about ancient texts, the art performances of oral tradition, or other activities.

In addition, the most important thing in this era of information mode is to use information technology in the process of acquisition, storage, and sharring information. The database contains about everything related to the oral tradition in Minangkabau web and connect to the Internet network, will provide a greater opportunity to introduce the oral tradition. Not only to the Minangkabau society but also to the world community.

7. Search and Retrieval by providing as much as access to society about the oral tradition of the Minangkabau

8. Actuating in the form of activities to introduce the oral tradition of Minangkabau into worldwide

This can be done through cultural activities which is held by the government and the private sector, such as exhibitions, seminars, and cultural performances. To make concepts of local text of Minangkabau was accepted into global, it could be through various ways:

- a. Conducts seminars on the theme of the Minangkabau culture, especially about the oral tradition of the Minangkabau, both nationally and internationally.
- b. Minangkabau society transliterate the oral tradition into a foreign language, like English, without changing the content of the manuscript.
- c. Implementing market strategies related to the manuscript culture.
- d. Finding the uniqueness of the oral traditions of Minangkabau society, so it could be served as a cultural identity.

C. Obstacles In Preserving Oral Tradition Of Minangkabau Society

Constraints that may be encountered in the activities and the preservation of knowledge in the oral tradition is:

- a. Lack of awareness of the elder's about the merits of knowledge transfer in preserving oral tradition. As the result, some of the older generation unwilling to transfer their knowledge to the public. They assumed if the knowledge they have as a 'sacred' matter and not everyone can learn about it.
- b. Lack of public awareness about the importance of oral tradition, so the oral tradition is considered as something archaic and unnecessary to sustained, moreover to developed it.
- c. The concern of government is still considered as half-hearted in order preserving Minangkabau tradition, especially the oral tradition. This can be seen from the lack of activities which have undertaken by the government relating with preservation of oral tradition.
- d. The absence of further evaluation of implementation tradition about Minangkabau in curriculum of high education.

Conclusion

Minangkabau society is very well known by oral tradition kaba babarito that conveys message by word of mouth. All forms of oral tradition in Minangkabau society contains various information such as religious values, information of historical value, customs and practices of public information, information that has the values of local wisdom in the daily life of the community, as well as contain genealogical information or kinship of a family in the community.

However, degradation of using oral tradition has raised as issue at this time. Oral tradition has begun to be abandoned and forgotten by the Minangkabau society. In addition due to the metanarrative discourse that shape public opinion. There are assumptions if local culture is less meaningful. Rapid growing of information and communication technology and the lack of any transfer in oral tradition have been affected the existence of oral tradition in Minangkabau society.

Therefore, the oral tradition of the Minangkabau is needed to preserve and sustain. Not only in the context of the form, but also in the context of the values which is kept in the oral tradition.
